Recommendations

Mr. Dale Clark

December 19, 2000

Dear Dale.

It is a pleasure to write a recommendation on behalf of Sigma Beta Phi, a colony of Delta Sigma Pi for their membership charter.

My role with the organization is to serve as their advisor. I am their liaison to Syracuse University, School of Management, Alumni and the Business community.

In my brief time (1 ½ years) with the fraternity, I have witnessed phenomenal growth. They have been responsible, they are concerned about membership, and they are providing excellent activities and programs on a regular basis. It is apparent that there is strong leadership and commitment by its members for the fraternity to succeed.

It is refreshing to see a group of students become so involved in their mission. They have a positive attitude for promoting the fraternity to our student body. They are growing and I would expect that they should increase significantly over the next three years.

Our Alumni Club has taken a strong interest in them and could be role models for them as they experience and learn about business. The Alumni Club feels that the membership of Sigma Beta Phi should be connected to our business community. They can be the catalyst to make that happen.

I truly believe they are one of the more exciting groups to emerge and I believe they can be very successful as a business fraternity. They seem to be providing a new activity that is very appealing and needed for our younger student's population.

Again, I recommend them to you for their charter.

Sincerely,

Russell J. Hamilton
Assistant Dean

To Whom It May Concern:

Please accept this correspondence as a letter of recommendation on behalf of Sigma Beta Phi.

As President of the Syracuse University School of Management Alumni Club, I have had the pleasure to become associated with the individuals of Sigma Beta Phi, cultivating a personal as well as business relationship. This bright, energetic and resourceful group, contacted me, regarding the feasibility of addressing them concerning my background in the financial industry, and career opportunities. 20+ individuals attended the interactive session and I believe it was mutually beneficial. In addition, the group recently conducted a PowerPoint presentation at our semi-annual Board of Directors meeting, with approximately 50+ people in attendance. The presentation was well planned, conducted in a professional manner, and stimulated a question and answer session. Not only was our Executive Committee impressed, George R. Burman, the Dean of the School of Management, commented that our alumni club is fulfilling a portion of its mission interacting and supporting the students involved with Sigma Beta Phi.

Their involvement in community service, hosting of professional events and tie in with School of Management alumni and faculty, provide a foundation for the future of the proposed colony of Delta Sigma Pi. Myself and the Executive Committee of our Alumni Club support their mission and goals, through personal involvement, as well as potential monetary support.

If I may be of further service please do not hesitate to contact me at (315) 424-6748.

Sincerely,

Mark W. Louer
President
Syracuse University School of Management Alumni Club

Mr. Clark –

It is my privilege to give you my recommendation for the installation of the Sigma Beta Phi colony at Syracuse University.

The colony has worked very hard over the past year. Not only have they met all the criteria, they have surpassed them. The point I want to emphasize with this recommendation letter is not the activities they have completed, but what I feel is more important – what they have learned about Brotherhood.

This colony has bonded together as a unit to reach their goals. It has been known that groups that feel as one are more successful, and that is what this chapter has accomplished. Not only is their bond shown with the activities they have completed, but it is also noticeable when you speak with them. You can hear the excitement. You can hear the bond they have. Their success can be proven by the number of new initiates this semester. Who would want to be part of an organization that isn't positive and top of their game?

Please, when placing your vote for this colony's installation, please vote yes, because not only do they have the ability to accomplish Delta Sigma Pi's criteria, but they fully understand Delta Sigma Pi's purpose, and the Brotherhood that binds that purpose.

Fraternally,

Corie Schilberg
Allegheny Regional Director

History

History – Syracuse University

Syracuse University is a student-centered academic research institution, serving the students with a variety of academic programs and degrees in 15 colleges. The University strives towards success always, and has enacted a 5-pointed vision that will carry them in the future.

Brought together from over 50 states and 90 countries, Syracuse Universities outreach is truly global. From fall 1998 figures, approximately 43% of students are from New York State, 53% from other states, and 4% from foreign countries. Of these, 54 percent are women and 46 percent are men.

Diversity is a large issue on campus; represented not only through highly active student organizations, but also through University enrollment rates. The 1999 undergraduate class of 11,197 included 15.5% African American, Asian American, Native American, and Latino students. 75% of these undergraduate students ranked in the top quarter of their high school classes, with the middle 50% of SAT scores ranging from 1100 to 1300. While the undergraduate class makes up the majority of students on campus, 6,111 part-time and full time graduate students have taken up study at the University as well.

At the core of Syracuse University's academic function is it's faculty and staff. Full time faculty total 822, part-time faculty 88, and adjunct faculty 476. The faculty's extensive knowledge of their subject areas are apparent, especially when 86% of the full-time faculty have earned Ph.D. or professional degrees. Supporting the faculty are 2,7888 full-time staff members, and 342 part-time staff 342. Class size is dictated by the popularity and level of each class, but generally class sizes are small—85% of undergraduate classes have fewer than 30 students in them. The undergraduate student to faculty ratio is 13/1.

As a research-institution, Syracuse University has several academically themed libraries, as well as a 6-story general library. The research framework contains 2.7million volumes, 000 periodicals/serials, 2,053 and CD-ROMs. The collection the growing and changing means of informational maintains 14 public and over clusters. T1 connections network the entire campus, with student access available readily from dormitory rooms, clusters, and classrooms.

Chartered in 1870 as a private, coeducational institution offering programs in the physical sciences and modern languages, Syracuse University began from one building—The Hall of Languages. Today, buildings are widespread—the Schine Student Center, Goldstein Auditorium, the Carrier Dome, Individual Colleges, Residence Halls, and South Campus Living. With so many academic, extracurricular, and residential buildings, Syracuse University has left a definite unavoidable visual mark on the Syracuse City area. One building in particular, the 50,000-seat Carrier Dome (named so after a $2.75 million gift from the Carrier Corporation) has gained national attention. Measuring up as the largest collegiate domed arena in the country, it features a wide variety of Division 1 sporting events broadcast on national television channels, as well as hosting concerts and special events.

Tradition is rich in the culture of Syracuse University. To complement its unique school color of Orange, the mascot “Otto the Orange” became official in 1995—although, unofficially, Otto had been in use on the athletic fields for years. Otto succeeds the “Saltine Warrior” as the official University Mascot—culturally inappropriate representation of a fictitious Native American warrior, it was scrapped in 1978.

The tree-lined scenery of the Syracuse University can sometimes make the campus feel like an oasis in an otherwise hectic, crowded world. Students can often be found lounging and studying on the grassy, quiet quad. Other sources of “distractions” include Marshall Street shops and eateries, and the local super mall Carousel Center. A short drive to Native American Casinos, Buffalo, Rochester and Ithaca, Syracuse University students find plenty to do.

From its humble beginnings, Syracuse University has certainly come a long way.

History – School of Management

Constructed in 1983, the School of Management houses undergraduate and graduate level business students—all studying a variety of concentrations of management related skills.

This 7-story structure features 11 classrooms equipped with state-of-the-art teaching technologies, computer clusters with access to the world wide web and financial information, a career services center for students to nurture their competitive edge, meeting places for student groups and/or students and teachers to work together, and much more.

Typical classes range from lectures in the large lecture room 010, to classes hosted in one of the several rooms with high-back rolling chairs and tables in horseshoe shaped layouts, to the more plain (but still functional) traditional desk and chair layout. Students take most of their core classes within the SOM building, but some students may find themselves taking classes at other locations on campus (e.g. math/science courses). The SOM Atrium is located in the center of the school and has a snack bar, benches, and study nooks for groups/individuals to meet and work in. The workload is often extensive, but many professors assign group work to help students work collectively.

Over 1300 students have come here to learn from the schools distinguished faculty. The school provides Accounting, Finance, Supply Chain, Marketing, and Entrepreneurship concentrations, or students can elect to combine their own unique interests into a General Management major. University wide, management majors make up of the more popular majors on campus, with 13% of the university enrolled in business management curriculum. As listed by the U.S. News and World Reports, as of the year 2000, the Syracuse University School of Management is within the top 50 of nationwide business schools; an accomplishment the school is very proud of.

With the help of SOM Dean George R. Burman, the school has made many marked improvements. Class size, student focus, expansion plans, the targeted mission statement, and the “5 Values”, have all helped them achieve this.

The Mission Statement

“The Syracuse University School of Management is a center for learning focused on entrepreneurial management, integrating global competition, leadership, and technology management, and committed to discovering and disseminating knowledge and providing select educational experiences of the highest caliber to advance the theory and practice of management.”

The 5-Core Values (summarized)

Learning- “Students should develop an appreciation for the importance of learning and a desire to continue to learn throughout their lives”

Honesty- “Honesty is the cornerstone of trust”

Effort- “Involving oneself in courses by paying attention to what’s going on and contributing to the learning process whenever possible”

Teamwork- “Teamwork is an essential part of success—students should prepare for their career by engaging in collaborative learning and learning fundamental skills of teamwork”

Service- “Students need to learn ways in which business people can use their skills to improve society”

History – Sigma Beta Phi

On February 8th, 2000, the future members of the Sigma Beta Phi colony were called together by a man named Kevin Cobb.

Kevin Cobb (pictured below), or “KC” as he was generally referred to, was a graduate student on campus and an alumnus of Delta Sigma Pi in his undergraduate days at another college. KC was shocked to discover that such a large campus as SU did not have a chapter! After going through many hassles (getting permission, meeting deans, sending mass emails, etc.), February 8th was one of the many triumphs resulting from his hard work. An information session was held for all interested students to find out more about what Delta Sigma Pi really was. After a short break, any remaining students who wanted to officially begin a chapter could stay. Those remaining students began what would prove to be a hard-working Delta Sigma Pi Colony. After a short debate, the name “Sigma Beta Phi” (Syracuse Business Fraternity) was chosen to represent the colony. Also, the acting colony officers were elected: Laura Berthiaume (Pres.), Ramya Venkateswaran (Senior VP), Bethany Kibbe (VPPA) (later leaving for personal reasons and replaced by Kalen Pascal), Lisa Kelly (VPCO), Michelle Lin (Secretary), Alexandra Berwitz (Treasurer), Bernard Mathew (Chancellor), and Michael Lombardi (Historian). This board’s members would change many times before the actual installation of the colony as a chapter.

After the election and the dismissal of the general body, the newly elected officers met that night to understand what their positions were all about. In the next few weeks they would meet scores of times to ask questions and plan for the future. The next months proved to be very challenging for all involved. How does the point system work? How do we plan for events? These challenges and more the colony has faced and worked through. Starting from scratch is never easy to do, but the members of Sigma Beta Phi have met their challenges and excelled. Their first semester, Sigma Beta Phi planned many activities, including: cleaning up the SOM grounds for incoming students, hosting professional speakers, hosting a candy sale, and interacting with young children at a neighborhood daycare. Also, after first deciding on blue and gray, red and black were chosen as the official colony colors. These colors are prevalent mostly on the colony’s website, which was constructed early on to provide members access to meeting minutes and event information. Near the end of the semester, many of the members also were able to attend an end of the year Rose Ball hosted by the Alpha Kappa Buffalo Chapter.

The colony returned to their second semester with a different set of elected officers, new members, and so many plans it was impossible to fit them all in. The semester’s eboard consisted of: Laura Berthiaume (Pres), Jaime Van Epps (SVP), VPPA Vacant (later filled by Ramya Venkateswaran), Kathryn McCollough (VPCO), Fanny Cheung (Secretary), Bernard Mathew (Chancellor), and Michael Lombardi (Historian). The semester's activities included: an Ice Cream Social, a Holiday Party with patients at the local Veterans Administration Hospital, several recruiting events, social get-togethers, charitable donations, and more. Unlike the previous semester, the executive committee did not plan the events outright—rather, committees were formed that handled each task. This semester's eboard also realized that planning for the future was important, but thinking in the present was important as well. They established a list of eboard expectations, created a committee packet (guidelines to create functional committees), and distributed surveys to their members to assess the functionality of the colony.

The third semester, Spring 2001, brought the anticipation for the charter into real perspective. Everyone seemed to realize that our goal was finally coming closer and closer to becoming a reality. This semester, with a new executive committee (Laura Berthiaume (Pres), Vacant (SVP), Michelle Lin (VPPA), Thomas Toole (VPCO), Kathryn McCollough (Secretary), Mateo Tarrats (Chancellor), and Michael Lombardi (Historian)), the group focused on community service, professional speakers, and the recruitment of several new and active members.

All three semesters have seen changes in membership, with each semester gaining more people. While some people left, more joined in their place. In the Spring of 2000, there were 27 colony members; in the Fall of 2000, there were 30 members; and in the Spring of 2001, there were 44 members. As illustrated by the graph, Sigma Beta Phi members have a variety of different majors—different interests in the corporate world, but not difference enough to separate them. Members have all found something for them within the organization.

Number of Colony Members in each Major

The Sigma Beta Phi Colony of Syracuse University is proud to have achieved so much in, what we consider, so little time. So many of our goals have materialized, and we could not be prouder. This has truly been a test of personal development for us all. We stand confident that the officials of Delta Sigma Pi will feel as strongly about or candidacy as we do.
